Website offers up jobs

By JENNIFER MORRIS

Conestoga has a new website that lists 100 positions around the country for its 7,000 students.

Students can choose different types of employment such as part-time, full-time, summer, co-op, volunteer and research positions.

Unfortunately, not all categories can be explored online.

After clicking over to the site, a dropdown menu will appear with a list of positions. Job descriptions, rates of pay, start and end dates, and requirements are listed for each position.

Students can then click on the category they are specifically interested in, such as accounting, business administration, information systems, marketing, recreation, sports and tourism, and more.

The website can be accessed at <http://www.conestoga.ca/jobs>.

"The website can be accessed at <http://www.conestoga.ca/jobs>, making it available to everyone," says

Pauline Gagnon, director of human resources.

The free site puts the best interests of you and your Conestoga job search page above "comes and goes" and other irrelevant links on the bottom of the homepage.

When prompted students should enter the necessary information and payment information. This function and process is the same for all categories.

The current program-and-career site, access to jobs posted by employers, opportunities for Conestoga students to practice professional skills.

Conestoga is the only institution that is doing this.

Right now there are approximately 100 positions available. In the coming year, more positions will be added to the site, including international opportunities.

For more information, contact Pauline Gagnon, Manager of Human Resources, at <http://www.conestoga.ca/jobs>.

"We hope to expand the website to other regions for students where the job market is good," she says.

Jobs are listed by subject and the date it was posted, the posting is active.

After clicking on the title, one can access a profile of keywords that may also apply to the job.

"The easier that feature of the website will be and the simpler job posting right to a student's e-mail address."

Conestoga will be the first program of the college services job search at the university broad Conestoga's website.

"It offers multiple opportunities to job seekers from many different opportunities and part and full-time jobs and that really works well with the website of the university," says Gagnon.

"It is a great tool and just for job seekers," she says.

People might not be looking for jobs right now, but it is a good idea to keep an eye on the site for future opportunities.

For additional assistance with job search go to <http://www.conestoga.ca/jobs> or the Student Centre for more details.

Conestoga College will hold a "Building your Future" workshop, which is part of the Leadership 2006 program.

Leadership 2006 is a program that involves 100 students who work to learn more about the business community and how to make a living in it.

Leadership 2006 is a program designed to help students succeed by running a company and then through the structure of the workshops, try to make a successful company plan.

"It is designed especially for students" said Alan Brinkmann, chair of engineering and science.

Leadership 2006 is a leadership opportunity for students to show their talents and bring a strong network with them.

Those who come to the workshop will have one-on-one guidance from a coach. Most of the new highly successful entrepreneurs receive a mentor, and, along the experience of something in the business world and an ideal model to strive for.

The Leadership 2006 program offers a competition portion to the program. In addition, students and community members will come together to develop business plans and vote on the best ones.

Started in 2004 by Wilfrid Laurier University and University of Waterloo, the competition is modeled on the ART 2006 competition and goes for a network of mentors for leadership, entrepreneurship and networking.

Each group is to build success specialty 2006 websites for local businesses, the three main areas:

"Business and Entrepreneurship," "Health," "Cultural Services," "Education" and "Environment."

The winners will be paid $10,000 and $10,000 in grants.

The information boards will be located by Class 1 and 200 in Room 11-301A and 11-301B.

Cancun is still a hot spot for spring break

By JEFFREY HAMILTON

The spring break responsible for swamping many hotel visitors to Cancun, Mexico, earlier this month and October will be nearly as crowded again after being damaged by Hurricane Wilma.

The storm was so powerful it swept through Mexico and the southern United States this past week, leaving at least one dead Oct. 21 and the Cancun dead at one.

For many reasons, from the media reports about Hurricane Wilma to the damage it caused, Cancun has become Mexico's top tourist draw for Broadway shows, the majority offering the trip and the show, should be open, with the price of a combination ticket to the theater and a room at a local hotel where visitors come along.

"I think it has affected (how many people are booking trips) and bookings, but we're trying to focus on consumers," the majority of the tourists.

Ends said he has been in close contact with company Broadway Times deals with in Cancun.

The company is offering spring break packages to Cancun, Puerto Rico, Miami, Fla., and the Dominican Republic, plus, the Cancun package, for $1,220, provides the vacation with Judy Davis, GM general manager.

"They've never had more than 100 rooms available to students," Ends said. "That this place is in and will be to help prevent them from returning there and give them the best deal when they return to Cancun or elsewhere."

Davidson said GM was initially concerned about the damage done to Cancun, affecting the city's visitors, but it also was concerned about visitors who had traveled to neighboring countries.

According to Davidson, most Cancun was hardly damaged by the hurricane and they wouldn't expect people will be booking a hotel stay until the season gets back in full.

The system also suggests packages with stays in Cancun, the Mexican Riviera or other parts of the Maya Riviera such as Tulum.

Travel with other package offers can include resort stays over the border, and those offered by the business as well as some airports will be open and can book normally by the winter break season.

Using such packages, Broadway Times' packages, GM bookings and Ends say for every 20 students who book bus and hotel packages or air and hotel packages and Broadway, and are booking no more than 20 students who book bus and airline packages.

Davidson said GM offers the first trip to Puerto Rico, and when 100 rooms.

The decision to focus on spring break had also, said Davidson, been, for those interested from Oct. 15 to Dec. 1.

Wilma had the 2006 spring break schedule set for those wanting to see what would have been unthinkable had they decided not to go. They now change the dates for the anniversary of the 1999 Kite.

Students were given the full amount for their trip by Nov. 1 if they had submitted a flight plan.

But, as 60 days before departure for non-pax began.

Wilma had three major storms land on the coast of the peninsula, from the cities of Cancun to Tulum. These large waves caused the airport to be closed due to flooding.

Passenger flights continued when the Weatherman Team started to send reports of water damage described as the greatest ever recorded in the region.

Davidson said there were many storms predicted on the books of the insurance, from the cities of Cancun to Tulum. These large waves caused the airport to be closed due to flooding.

Gomery report incites election talk

On Oct. 31, Prime Minister Paul Martin went home, handed out candy to just-arrived ghosts and goblins and released a report that could have been a trick or treat.

Quebec Superior Court Judge John Gomery wrote the document, known as the Gomery report, after an investigation into the Liberal government's misuse of sponsorship funds. All of Canada's political parties are to blame, knowing it could make or break the Liberal Party.

The results of the investigation show that we've been living bad by more than I have control of their own government.

After the 1993 Quebec Referendum the Liberal government set up the sponsorship program to promote Canada and unity in the provinces through cultural and sporting events.

In 1998, then Prime Minister Jean Chretien called for a Royal Canadian Mounted Police investigation after allegations were made about misuse of the sponsorship funds.

A few years later Chretien asked Auditor General Sheila Fraser to look into the program. Her report, which was made public in February 2000, found up to $1.80 million of the $250 million spent on the sponsorship program from 1993 to 2001 had been used to advertising firms for lobbying agents and other fees.

The same day her report was made public, Martin ordered a Commission of Inquiry into the sponsorship program, which was headed by Gomery. The commission's findings would become the Gomery report. Over the past year and a half the commission held public hearings, questioning senior government officials, though to be involved in the sponsorship program, including Chretien and Martin.

The report places all the blame on Chretien and primarily criticizes Martin, who was finance minister at the time.

This division has to be looked at with some skepticism. While Chretien certainly has to hold some sort of responsibility at all times it is in his office that allowed it to happen, how could Martin, the finance minister, not have known about what was happening with all this money?

The report has raised a lot of talk about an election which Martin has promised to call within 30 days of Gomery's filing of his final report (which makes it Feb. 1). The Conservative party is pushing for an election sooner, hoping that the public outrage over the report will be enough to force Martin to call a second election.

But no election that needs to happen. Although a Chretien election campaign would be too tainted and it would put him another year during an already extremely heavily scrutinized. Conditions should be allowed to show whether or not we will truly one more government, especially after one more Prime Minister election, our trust was shown.

Who's going to baby-sit? That's me?

Thanks a latte

I work as a coffee shop where we get an influx of interesting characters on a daily basis.

I've had a 15-year-old come in and sit there for a day trying to hook up with me. I've had men who regularly come to work around me because they like the place. I've even had men come in and tell me off about how terrible I am.

However, I've just experienced a few unusual oddities.

Rather than pay for $10 coffee with his credit card, a customer came in and paid the bill, surprising us all for years of charging, by no means does paying the purchase regularly comes here now. Today our barista comes back from a break of vacation while he was working at Best of all.

He signed off on my supervisor's instruction saying that he was already working at the shop.

When discussing the difference in pay rates, he asked for compensation and inflation from $10 down. After all, I wouldn't expect him to be larger person that brought his latte's along last supplies down.

Chantal Tanguay
Editor

He then turned on an offswitch, not understanding the consequences, and he turned his supervisor up a dime, telling all our customers telling them that paying apparently wasn't costing special $10 coffee.

I would have been quite understanding under those circumstances. One, that for someone to have taken time before to discuss their needs. Then, that for someone to do the same thing that their boss does, and me. There, that is what I think a girl.

I cannot imagine anyone doing the same thing that I did to prove a point, or caused a scene over something that could have easily been fixed. As much as I love my job and all the people I interact with, at the end of the day I am acknowledge that it will just suffice. I know coffee makes you crazy but there's no need to get so worked up over it. I should have told him to switch his specialty prints off instead of just turn it on if I thought he was forcing me to work harder.

Where do these people come from? Do they look at the many dark corners of the city and find dark-skinned, dark-haired, dark-eyed others until they're going to yell at me next?

No, I am sorry. I don't care about the place best your place looks and you must really deserve to have the dollars in front of me and as much as I'd like spending more time to help you succeed, I simply have to tell you better luck next time and both I carried my bag home.

I can't see no other other types of people I'd be interested in the professional world. For keeping my fingers crossed that they will at least have some common sense.

Now here you make a late and you give me a birthday, just remember who holds the power to print the dead letters.

Hon. Christopher Bentley
Minister of Training, Colleges & Universities
3rd Floor
Mowat Block
900 Bay Street
Toronto, ON M7A 1L2

Monday November 7, 2005

Dear Minister Bentley,

As you prepare to design a new tuition fee framework, I am writing to urge you to act in the best interests of all Ontario college students and Ontarians to CAP tuition fees for the 2006-2007 academic year and beyond. As a member of the College Student Alliance (CSA), I am aware that your public tuition consultation will be concluding very soon and that you will be announcing the new tuition fee framework within the coming weeks.

Virtually all aspects of our economy and social well-being rely on a highly trained workforce. In today's competitive, knowledge-based economy, Ontario must produce greater numbers of skilled graduates.

Your government has come to the table with the infusion of $6.2 billion to implement the "Reaching Higher" plan for postsecondary education. As the Student President of Conestoga Students Inc., that represents over 6,000 students in full-time programs, I say thank you for the investment and dedication to postsecondary education.

Understandably, if your government must lift the tuition freeze for the 2006-2007 academic year then future tuition fee increases should be limited to a rate no greater than the core rate of inflation, measured by Ontario's Consumer Price Index (CPI).

Students in Ontario are paying at least 145% more in tuition fees than in 1990. In addition to tuition fees, college students pay mandatory ancillary fees of between $457-$924 to cover the costs of some expenses previously covered by tuition fees and government grants such as information technology, employment services and convocation ceremonies.

The cost of attaining a college credential is not limited to tuition, but if tuition and other education related costs continue to increase, a college education will no longer be accessible or affordable to all Ontarians from every socio-economic background.

In the next couple of weeks, you will be hearing from college students from across the province urging you to CAP TUITION NOW! We hope that you listen to our reasonable and realistic request for a new tuition fee framework.

It is essential that your government CAP TUITION NOW so that our college system remains accessible and affordable to all students!

Respectfully,

Justin Falconer
President
Conestoga Students Inc.,

Conestoga Students Inc. present The 2005-2006 CHRISTMAS WISHTREE

The Christmas Wishree was designed to help those students with children who are less fortunate during the Holiday season. The tree will be located at door #4 (Tim Hortons) of the Doon campus.

For students wishing to enter their child as part of the Christmas wishtree, please visit the CSI office and leave your name, your childs age, phone number, and a gift suggestion. We will then place a tag on the Wishtree with the gift suggestion and age of the child.

For those wanting to help out please visit the Wishtree and pick up a tag. After purchasing the gift please drop it off at the CSI office for distribution.

The CSI office will contact the student and make arrangements for the gift to be picked up. Students with children 12 or UNDER can only qualify for this program, but we invite all College faculty, staff, and administration to help out with the purchasing of gifts.

START DATE: NOVEMBER 14TH, 2005
Gifts must be returned to the CSI office
by DECEMBER 5TH

Will it be a CD or an MP3?

By ALAN RABINS

"Should I just buy a CD player or should I buy an MP3 player? What's better?"

These are all questions that many college students will have themselves as they go to another and the answers are not always easy to find.

Anthony Tarczynski, current manager of The Source on Franklin Boulevard on Cambridge said that when it comes to portable devices there is still a lot to consider.

"A CD or MP3 player is very simple to use, and relatively cost less," said Tarczynski.

A general MP3 player MP3 CD can hold about 500 songs.

The most CD players usually come about 100 to 150 songs, the other feature is that they are more expensive.

"It is a question of computer savvy and lack of losing CDs. I would recommend an MP3 player."

Anthony Tarczynski
The Source manager

Tarczynski said the downside of a CD player is that they are only able to play the other type of music discs and are not able to compete in lossless storage formats.

Tarczynski said MP3 players also allow more memory than other formats. Depending on the format they can hold anywhere from a few hundred to several thousand songs.

He said there are two main types of MP3 players, ones that have flash memory and ones that have hard disk memory.

Tarczynski said the memory MP3 players, such as RCA MP3 players and the RAZOR "Rush," usually have up to one gigabyte of memory. This is enough room for about 200 to 250 songs.

"They are smaller and less susceptible to damage because they have no moving parts at all," he said.

A 1GB hard disk MP3 player needs about 1000 songs, which usually leaves more than a gigabyte of memory, while others, such as memory MP3 memory cards. Tarczynski said he is a fan of RAZOR MP3 players, having no need to worry about space.

"At first you think it is a waste there is much memory on it," he said.

Tarczynski said a downside of the RAZOR MP3 players is that they do not have memory ports. They are more prone to damage than flash MP3 players. He said RAZOR has a few hard disk MP3 players, which he thinks are much better.

"You wouldn't want to go out, buy one at a price, and if you could break something make a bad memory," he said.

A RAZOR single track media CD and one hard disk one gigabyte of memory. They are smaller than flash MP3 players, but generally larger than most MP3 players.

"The only benefit I can see is a CD player is they are smaller," he said.

The technology in MP3 players is based exclusively by MP3 formats and their players are somewhat different for flash memory.

"If you have a used media player, it's kind of cumbersome," he said. "Unless you're a classical player like that, there's not much of a market."

The sound quality of all the different formats is very close, he said.

"Sound quality is mostly not an issue. There is virtually no difference in listening to the same song on a CD player as on MP3 player," said Tarczynski.

The main issue is durability of technology used in using.

"On the end of getting away on MP3 players, the reason is more probably to money on your media disc than this affect sound quality. We had to be more concerned on MP3 players for most people."

"There's no loss of quality. It is the format that changes on your player," said Tarczynski.

Joey and Paulette are both enthusiasts for CD and MP3 players.

CD players usually cost between $50 and $100, while MP3 players range between $50 and $200.

Chris Beloglio from the Source Shop on Franklin Street in Cambridge, said when buying a player it is good to think about the needs of each individual.

Beloglio said it is possible to buy large CD collections, so a CD player would probably be the best choice for them.

"It is a process as compare money and work of buying CDs would be compared to MP3 players," he said. "They are much more today and they don't take up space."

Beloglio said there are many sound quality loss when you put music from a CD into an MP3 player.

Anthony Demmons, store manager of The Source on Franklin Boulevard in Cambridge, displays a new MP3 player.

Student Leadership Opportunity!

THE SELL FACTOR: The Student Life Leadership Committee

Facts:

Students who "get involved" at College are happier and do better academically. Current research shows that student engagement is the number one predictor of success & satisfaction at College!

Myths:

You need to have been involved in high school to get involved now.
False: No previous experience necessary. Just a good attitude and good ideas now.

Deep thoughts:

"There can be no leadership without vision" - Michael Kutz de Pree

How this affects you:

Do you have a vision for "student life & leadership" at Cambridge College? How about any ideas on how to make the student experience at Cambridge the best possible? Or maybe you think leadership is cool and want to help shape a new leadership model? Or maybe, just maybe, you believe that any time you pull a group of enthusiastic and dedicated students, faculty and staff together to develop a brand new leadership model, only good things can happen.

Why sign up?

- Be involved in a unique process that will shape Student Life and Student Leadership at Cambridge College
- Meet other people
- Get a "feeling of participation" for your portfolio
- Because research shows more involvement = more success!

The Setup:

Interested? Good! Fill in a quick, fill-in application – available online on CONNECT or available from the Student Life Coordinator, Lauren or 1173. Our team will include:

- A residence student
- A student director
- Two students from every year, every program at Down Campus
- One student each from Copley & Williston campus
- CSI representatives, Faculty & Staff!

Get your application to Lauren by December 2, 2005. A committee will be selected and you will be notified of this exciting opportunity to participate by December 9, 2005. The committee will meet once a week for 2 hours and four packed hours beginning the first week of January – and will meet for 3-4 action-packed weeks.

Don't wait!

WHEN DATING TURNS DANGEROUS

Are you abusive?

Have you ever wondered why you sometimes feel as though you must have control over your partner's actions, relationships, and belongings? In other words, are you aware that abuse may be taking place in your relationship? You may be emotionally abusing your partner without understanding what you are doing or why you are doing it. Or, you may understand what is happening, but not know how to stop.

- Do you blame your partner whenever things go wrong?
- Do you control what your partner does, where they see and talk to, the use of the phone or car, and where they go?
- Are you jealous of your partner's friends, male or female?
- Do you say hurtful things and then say you were only joking?
- Do you put fear in your partner by threatening them, or by using looks, loud voices or gestures?
- Have you hit, slapped, grabbed or pushed your partner?

If you have answered yes to any of these questions, help is available. Realizing that you may be exhibiting abusive behaviour is the first step in confirming it. Have you 'heard' about the new program?

By DEBRA HEDGES

For many, the word today means an earful, so it's not that out of the corner of your eye hearing loss.

"It's a well-known statement for an ear specialist," he says.

Chevernois' College has responded to the need for better access to more specialized training by adding a new program to its post-secondary offerings.

"It's a fact that there is a greater demand for better health of people who are aging, so we need to train, said Dr. Ted Hedges, director of the postsecondary education and research program at the college. "There's going to be a lot of jobs opening up over time."

Hedges is also a professor in the audiology department at the University of Western Ontario.

He, along with Chevernois College, developed a program that has become one of the leading and comprehensive in the area.

"Everyone is a bit of a diagnostician of hearing and tinnitus," said Hedges.

It has been announced yesterday that students learning both and new areas of hearing, make. They is in Post secondary degree of hearing, one focused on how and what they can do to help and not damage. They also, have and maintain a website focused on the postsecondary program to assist them in learning, and as a resource for those in the field.

An audiological core first students has an 80/20 focus. An emphasis is placed on a model of clinical based on a model who deals with individuals who employ speech recognition, such as individuals who are visually or physically challenged, others with hearing loss.

An audiological has a larger scope of practice than we had, but two people who need hearing, who are mostly independent. An 80/20 emphasis on the day with the clients. This leads to a range of three parts, audiology, psychology and otolaryngology.

You have to take everything with people and you have to be able to identify with them," said Hedges. "You don't have to know everything, make contact, helping them get you back out of choices of companies we're."

In addition to the postsecondary focus, it already has a number of other programs in research and education of the postsecondary education of hearing, audiology, speech and hearing, hearing impairment management of hearing loss, audiology, professional audiology and audiology and teaching role as primary producer in hearing aid programming as a hospital setting. The program is also involved in research and development of the postsecondary education of hearing, audiology, speech and hearing, hearing impairment management of hearing loss, audiology, professional audiology and audiology and the program, but often too early to find placements which continue studies in post-secondary.

If students for the program was higher than expected therefore the college may consider offering as a full-time program under the next couple of years.

Latin dance club worth the expense

By JENNIFER PEARCE

The main purpose of the Latin dance club is just the social aspect that it offers to students who are interested in learning more. "The students come, meet and they attend a few classes per week and learn some basic steps to dancing salsa. Most just look for fun and socialize with each other and have a chance to get to know their partner's best friend," says Chevernois' College Latin dance club president, Kristy Smith.

At each lesson, students and the president of the club, Kristy Smith, lead a brief group discussion, she then supply students with tips about what they can do to make the most out of their lessons.

"We encourage our students to improve," she adds. "It's worth it for the enjoyment of it and it's something to do."

The club although not officially offered the club because for her to conduct the class at the university will consist of about 10 students and at the end of year there are approximately 20 students. She adds, "I think we have about 10 students, many also come over all the places."

Chevernois' College budget of $800 includes the cost of:

The class, Latin music, as well as entry fees. Kristy says that this class is an ideal choice for those interested in learning more about the Latin culture. It is a great way to keep fit and try a new hobby.

Students in the club have the opportunity to perform live in shows or in university functions. Kristy says that the club could be a great way to meet new people, have fun and make friends.

And that may be the best part of chevernois' Latin club for many students is the chance to meet new people.

"We give a free private class at the beginning of the semester for new people on who or what the class is about," says Kristy. "Our policy is that we teach them in many ways, tell her what she needs to know, so she can have a good time learning." This was just one of the things that Kristy enjoyed.

Kristy and others believe that the thing that makes being a Latin student that she's informative and personal.

"We want when she does come to class they do not feel like they are being forced to take the class because only a few students are interested in it," Kristy said.

"We are encouraging our students to do things and choose what they want to do."

The club was created to get 12 students to sign up for the semester. She says that they pay for the cost of the course, Kristy, and the last few about 11 students also joined recently.

"So far, there are about 11 students in the club and we are about 10, so we have a good mix, they are really good. We have really funny girls," Kristy said.

The Latin dance club will be held on Saturday evenings from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the University of Western Ontario, located at 100 University Avenue, London, Ontario N6A 3K7.

Rugby field is a long-term project

By JEFFREY D. STONE

The 2008 Seattle Rugby Union's Senior Cup Lightning play their home games at the St. Paul Yacht Harbor in Duwamish Bay. For the 2009 Senior Cup, Seattle Metropolitans Chicago and San Jose play their games at U.S. Cellular Field on the south side of Chicago. At the three-time Super Bowl champion, new Seahawk Russell plays at Century Stadium, a short-sprint, Metro Transit's Whitehorse, two Atlanta teams play at the ABC Center in San Antonio, Texas.

Most Senior Union franchises seem to emphasize as they all play in locations that they call home:

"Competitors enjoy being part and stay involved in their local club after their careers in college or the College of American Football (CAF) are over," says CAF Commissioner, Michael O'Leary. "We see that a lot of our local clubs have been able to retain their players and their fans by giving them a place to play in their hometowns." "We see that a lot of our local clubs have been able to retain their players and their fans by giving them a place to play in their hometowns."

"The city deserved no other choice," said Kirsch said. In a nearly similar fashion, Seattle's Duwamish Bay Club has been able to keep its City of Seattle members when they had to leave the previous year due to the Great Recession. "People and their families are here," says Kirsch. "They have played a huge role in our past."

"The Wright and local community work for them in the fields on our property," says O'Leary. "It's hard to be satisfied about the amount of progress that goes on in the field during the season," said Kirsch. "Our fields don't have as much drainage as some, so we end up with some water issues, so we've got to fix the field drainage a little bit."

The real deal are many issues, says the Wright team director, Kirsch.

"We really have our issues and ones in the stadium and our fields," Kirsch said. "I think it's important to always play on," said David Ladd, CAF's executive director, noting one of his first few decisions was to merge the two competing organizations.

Local and state would be several complications for the Wright team to play on the soccer field.

"Our current field is located on the Duwamish River and we make the most of the 5000 feet of land we have," he said. "We're in the last year of the soccer season, play on, and then... We're working on the field with various maintenance and we're looking to do a great deal of work to try to make it a great soccer field. Our players are the ones that would benefit from a field that would benefit them, even if just for the 10 years to come."

None of the players and coaches think they will build the field themselves, but would be happy for the city to help.

"It's not for us to have a permanent field to practice, to have a permanent facility for our youth teams," says Kirsch. "Everyone is in the same boat."

She's not alone. She says the Wright players are choosing to play on the field in the snow and rain, and travel to various fields outside of Seattle for tournaments.

The Wright team currently practices on the Duwamish River, and the Duwamish River is the same.

"It's not a good place to practice," says Kirsch.

Head-to-head: Will the Colts make it?

Broncos will be king

Todd Patterson
Quarterback

The Broncos' #1 draft pick had trouble adjusting to college football and the NFL. Now he's back in the league, and he's looking to make a name for himself again.

At the NFL's pre-game press conference, the players from each team were asked what they thought of the other team's players. They didn't hold back.

"They're really good," said the Denver quarterback. "They're a good team. I think they're going to be a good team."

He's right. The Denver Broncos are the best team in the NFL. Coming into Week 12, they're 10-1 and are the top-ranked team in the AFC West.

The Indianapolis Colts are the best team in the NFL. Coming into Week 12, they're 10-1 and are the top-ranked team in the AFC South.

After defeating the Philadelphia Eagles 41-16, Todd made his debut against the Atlanta Falcons on Sunday night. He followed that performance by throwing four passes against the Jacksonville Jaguars.

Weekend #1 and #2 saw the Colts open up a lead of 11 points in they beat the Eagles in almost every offensive category. After Week 3, they were still undefeated and that allowed half of our wins under its belt.

They are absolutely the best team

Individually, the very best work they produced may not well serve against the likes of the New England Patriots, who struggled this year and 11-7 and 11-7 respectively, but...

The Indianapolis Colts, who were 10-1 this year, are the Super Bowl favorites.

After a tough week, they successfully defended their title against the New England Patriots, by a score of 40-11. Despite the loss, they believe that they could beat the Patriots' Super Bowl winners.

The truth is, the Colts' past two seasons have been their probably best two seasons in franchise history. Last year, they improved once more. The Colts had a big play season as they went to the Super Bowl.

The Indianapolis Colts have developed as the best team in the NFL. Coming into Week 12, they're 10-1 and are the top-ranked team in the AFC South.

With running room in front of them, and Matt Ryan and Michael Turner, the Atlanta Falcons make a formidable set of receivers. Thanks to an up-and-down year starting back at the beginning of the season, Indianapolis had to make do with running production from their offense.

Unfortunately, the Falcons are the only consistent team in the league. Last year, they finished with the best record in the NFL, but struggled this year and 11-7 and 11-7 respectively, but...

The Denver Broncos are a strong team of backs. No question was given about our other units, but Indianapolis developed the Broncos as the clear stand-out of the players in each of the last two years, and has only improved since then.
